THE SAINTSGUY BIRTHDAY-SHOWDOWN!

The Rudy

"HEY EVERYBODY, this Monday Night is The SaintsGuy's Birthday Party and The SaintsGuy hates the Eagles! The good thing is that each year when the SAINTS have a game on his birthday, they win!!

"I'll definitely be there and I'm bringing my lucky hat!" - Chris the Fan

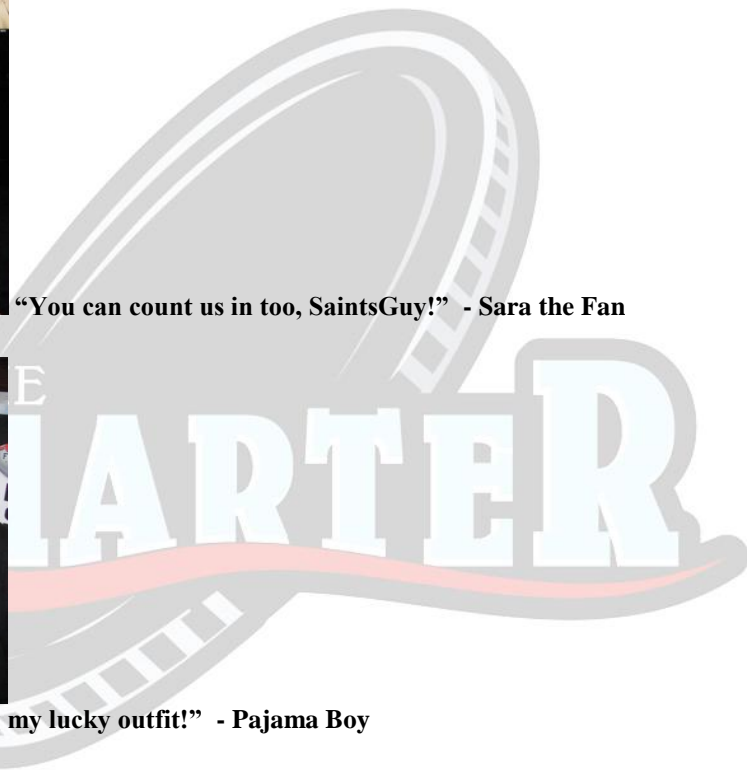

"You can count us in too, SaintsGuy!" - Sara the Fan

"I'll be there SaintsGuy and I'm wearing my lucky outfit!" - Pajama Boy

"And I'm bringing the whole gang for this one!" - Henry

Joe Vitt's return from a six-game suspension didn't go as planned as the Saints' modest two-game winning streak came to a screeching halt when the Broncos scored 27 unanswered points.

Now, the Saints have to get back on track against an Eagles' team that is desperate for a victory as well after dropping four of its last five games following a 2-0 start.

The Saints know their defense needs a lot of work after it gave up 400 or more yards for the seventh consecutive game, the first team to do that since 1950.

Of course, the League's previous #1 Offense uncharacteristically faltered against the Broncos with a season-low 252 yards, with 80 of that total coming on its final drive when the Broncos led by 27 points, and let's not forget ALL of the dropped passes by the receiving core.

"This is a team effort," Vitt said. "When the passing game doesn't flourish the way we expect it to around here, we still are going to be held accountable to win games and compete."

Tackle Zach Strief said it's hard to point to one thing that has caused the Saints to already lose two more games than last season, when they tied the franchise record with 13 wins en route to claiming the NFC South title.

While the 32nd-ranked defense has been porous, the running game ranks last in the league with just 72.6 yards per game and is sorely lacking the consistency it had in ranking sixth in rushing a year ago.

"It's not one thing, it's a lot of things," Strief said. "On plays where the offensive line is blocking well, we might miss a block on the edge or we might miss a hole. On the plays where the edge is blocking well and the running back is hitting the right hole, we're missing a block."

"There's a lot of football left," middle linebacker Curtis Lofton said. "We've won two games. We just have to get back on that winning streak again."

SERIES HISTORY: It's the 26th regular-season meeting. Eagles lead series, 15-10. The Saints have claimed two of the last three matchups after the Eagles won five in a row between 1992 and 2003. The teams have also split two playoff games, with the Eagles taking a 1992 wild-card matchup before the Saints got even with a 27-24 win in the Divisional Playoffs in 2006.

The Eagles have made themselves at home in The Dome over the years.

They are 7-3 in the regular season and 1-1 in the playoffs in New Orleans since the stadium opened in 1975.

DID YOU KNOW THIS: Having already given up 3,323 yards in seven games—with each opponent gaining at least 400 yards—the Saints are well on their way to setting an NFL record for single-season yards allowed.

The Saints have allowed 474.7 yards per game, which is a full 50 yards more per game than the 1981 Baltimore Colts' average of 424.6 yards a contest. At the rate the Saints are going, they would allow 7,595 yards—or 800 more than the total of 6,793 put up against the '81 Colts, making them, OFFICIALLY, the worst Defense EVER!!

AND WHAT ABOUT THIS: If there is a bit of a consolation for the Saints in a 2-5 start, they can at least say they're looking forward to the month of November—starting with Monday night's meeting with the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Saints have won 11 consecutive games in November, going 5-0 in 2009 and winning all three of the games in both 2010 and 2011. They've won 13 of their last 14 in November dating to the 2008 season and are 17-6 overall in the month since Sean Payton took over in 2006.

Come Party with Me, and all my favorite

Who-Dats for Monday Night Football as the “Aerial Assault” takes on the “Other Dirty Birds” in the Birthday Showdown!! Game time is at 7pm and even though it’s my birthday I’ll be giving away even more prizes all night and I’ll be having our....

FINAL DOUBLE-JERSEY GIVEAWAY of the SEASON!!

That’s right everybody, we’ve got an extra jersey to raffle off this week, but that’s only because we didn’t have a raffle last Sunday since not enough people attended the game. What? We didn’t have enough fans?! Can you believe that crap?! Not enough Who-Dats were at The Quarter for our game last Sunday and now I’ve got left-over prizes?! UNBELIEVABLE!!!! That’s never happened in the history of our club!!!! So, for this one, I’m not keeping anything as all of the Saints PRIZES are going out the door this week so don’t miss out by staying at home!!!!

UNLEASH THE ASSAULT, NOW!!
