OFFICIAL 2009 SEASON MEMBER-NEWSLETTER #29

GONE WITH THE WIN...

*N*ot since the summer of 1864 (and the last time an Atlanta Braves team lost in the Playoffs) has an entire city and even the whole State of Georgia felt so defeated. With a barrage from the “Aerial Assault” and a 4th down attempt “stuffed” by Vilma to end the game any glimmer of hope for a Playoff appearance by the “Dirty Birds” during the 2009 campaign were extinguished. GOOD JOB GUYS!!

*T*he Falcons (6-7) lost for the sixth time in eight games and their playoff hopes and dreams of a golden birdcage are finished. They will need to win out to avoid extending one of the most unwanted streaks in sports—Atlanta has never had consecutive winning seasons during its 44-year history, so there’s another fine stat by the Elias Bureau.

As for the SAINTS, they're chasing history....to escape their own history. Three more wins to go for a perfect regular season, something that only two other teams have done. Brees had another big game with a 31-of-40 performance for 296 yards that included 2 TD passes to Reggie Bush and another to Marques Colston.

The "Boyz in Black & Gold" did it again, so now I'm REALLY starting to believe this stuff about destiny or fate or whatever you want to call it. The SAINTS just won a game on a day when their secondary was horrible and Coach Payton made a terrible decision to fake a field goal. They survived all that and they're 13-0 for the first time in history. Somebody's got their back!!

The 2007 New England Patriots rolled up an 18-0 record before losing to the New York Giants in the "Big Game". There is no doubt that every member of that team and its fan base would trade a regular-season win for the world championship, so when Coach Payton was asked if and when he would "rest" his players, he replied; "We're going full-throttle on this thing and we're not slowing down or stopping for anyone". That's what we saw on this day which explains the fake-FG attempt, but how come he chose not to "go for it" on 4th and 1 at our own 45? Perhaps after the Falcons got the ball back and then scored another TD (which tied the game) Payton felt it was necessary to throw in a little razzle-dazzle to keep'em guessing....

Stop doing that stuff Coach. The rest of us are getting ulcers!

In any case, the SAINTS wrapped up the #2 seed & 1st Round Bye, but along with doing that, they also won their 13th game of the year which sets another record. The 2009 SAINTS have won more games than any other SAINTS team in history and we've still got more to go! And speaking of "more to go" let's take a look at the new Playoff picture now that the Eagles beat the G-men, the Packers racked up another win, and Jerry's Kids couldn't play.

If the Playoffs were next weekend this would be the new scenario:

After watching the “Minnesota Favre’s” beat up the Bengals you really have to think one of two things, which are: A) The Minnesota Vikings are for real, or B) The Cincinnati Bengals aren’t for real, bcuz these two clubs keep losing when you think they’re going to win, and winning when you think they’re going to lose. (It makes it difficult when you’re placing bets.)

“This one’s getting me on the next cover of S.I.!!”

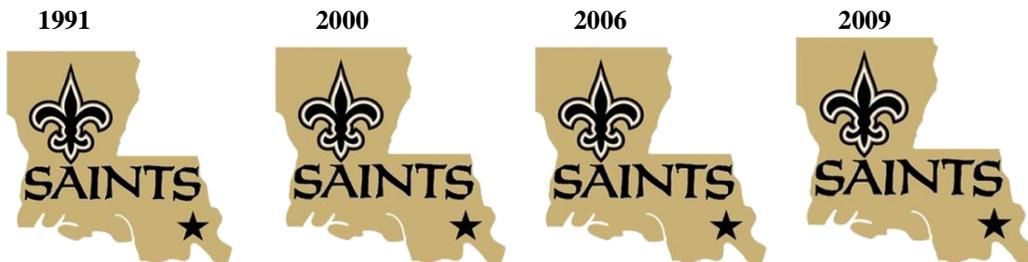

- Reggie Bush

“I’m just glad somebody wanted my jersey too. Thanks Evie!” - DT Sedrick Ellis

But think about this: This SAINTS team has yet to get rattled, and that is its strength. Think about it, the SAINTS have been behind at home and on the road, they have been ahead in both places, and they have won an overtime game.
